Inland Private Capital Corporation – Important Disclosures

This is neither an offer to sell nor a solicitation of an offer to buy any security, which can be made only by an offering memorandum and sold only by broker dealers and registered investment advisors authorized to do so. An offering is made only by means of the applicable offering memorandum in order to understand fully all of the implications and risks of the offering of securities to which it relates. Investments are suitable for accredited investors only.

QOZ Risk Factors to Consider

There are substantial risks associated with the U.S. federal income tax aspects of a purchasing interests in a qualified opportunity fund. The following risk factors summarize some of the tax risks to an investor. All prospective investors are strongly encouraged to consult with and rely on their own tax advisors. The tax discussion here is not intended, and should not be construed, as tax advice to any potential investor.

- There is a lack of precedent and limited guidance related to qualified opportunity funds.
- A program intended to qualify as a qualified opportunity fund may not constitute a qualified opportunity fund for a variety of reasons, including a failure to substantially improve the property within the first 30 months of its operation. If a fund does not qualify as a qualified opportunity fund, then no deferral or elimination of taxable gain will be available to the its members.
- An investor must acquire his or her interest in a qualified opportunity fund on or before December 31, 2019 in order to receive a step-up in basis equal to 15% of the gain deferred by reason of the investment in the fund.
- Investors who hold interests in a qualified opportunity fund through December 31, 2026, and who have deferred gain through that time by acquiring such interests, will automatically recognize some or all of the federal income tax gain that they deferred on December 31, 2026.
- The state, local and other tax implications of a qualified opportunity zone investment are unclear.

Additional Risk Factors to Consider

An investment in offerings sponsored by Inland Private Capital Corporation involve significant risk and is suitable only for investors who have adequate financial means, desire a relatively long-term investment and who will not need immediate liquidity from their investment and can afford to lose their entire investment. The risks involved with an investment in an Inland Private Capital Corporation-sponsored fund include, but are not limited to:

- No public market currently exists, and one may never exist, for the interests of any Inland Private Capital Corporation-sponsored program. The purchase of interests in any Inland Private Capital Corporation-sponsored program is suitable only for persons who have no need for liquidity in their investment and who can afford to lose their entire investment.
- Inland Private Capital Corporation-sponsored programs offer and sell interests pursuant to exemptions from the registration provisions of federal and state law and, accordingly, those interests are subject to restrictions on transfer.

- There is no guarantee that the investment objectives of any particular Inland Private Capital Corporation-sponsored program will be achieved.
- The actual amount and timing of distributions paid by Inland Private Capital Corporation-sponsored programs is not guaranteed and may vary. There is no guarantee that investors will receive distributions or a return of their capital.
- Investments in real estate are subject to varying degrees of risk, including, among other things, local conditions such as an oversupply of space or reduced demand for properties, an inability to collect rent, vacancies, inflation and other increases in operating costs, adverse changes in laws and regulations applicable to owners of real estate and changing market demographics.
- Inland Private Capital Corporation-sponsored programs depend on tenants for their revenue, and may suffer adverse consequences as a result of any financial difficulties, bankruptcy or insolvency of their tenants.
- Inland Private Capital Corporation-sponsored programs may own single-tenant properties, which may be difficult to re-lease upon tenant defaults or early lease terminations.
- Disruptions in the financial markets and challenging economic conditions, including those resulting from the novel coronavirus and resulting pandemic, could adversely affect the operating results of properties owned by IPC-sponsored programs and the ability of such programs to service the indebtedness on their properties.
- The prior performance of other programs sponsored by Inland Private Capital Corporation should not be used to predict the results of future programs.
- The Inland Private Capital Corporation-sponsored programs do not have arm's length agreements with their management entities.
- The Inland Private Capital Corporation-sponsored programs pay significant commissions and fees to affiliates of Inland Private Capital Corporation, which may affect the amount of income investors earn on their investment.
- Persons performing services for the managers of the Inland Private Capital Corporation-sponsored programs perform services for other Inland Private Capital Corporation-sponsored programs, and will face competing demands for their time and service.
- The acquisition of interests in an Inland Private Capital Corporation-sponsored program may not qualify under Section 1031 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the "Code") for tax-deferred exchange treatment.
- Changes in tax laws may occur, and may adversely affect an investor's ability to defer capital gains tax and may result in immediate penalties.
- The Delaware statutory trust structure is inflexible and, in certain events, may be converted to a LLC structure, which would have a tax impact on investors.